Matthew Reynolds, Advisory Board Chair of Sydney-based Yarmouth Group has announced today that Yarmouth will renew its membership of The Property Funds Association of Australia ('PFA') for 2012. The PFA, formerly known as ADPIA, is the peak national body representing the interests of its members in the unlisted property investment sector including real estate trust and property syndicate managers.

Mr Reynolds said "Yarmouth is very proud to be a member of PFA and we have been impressed with the work that PFA does for its members. As an advisor to real estate investors and fund managers we get great value from our association with PFA."

During the announcement Andrew McNeil, Managing Director of Yarmouth Group commented "Yarmouth advises clients in the unlisted real estate sector in the fields of corporate finance, real estate investment, sourcing private equity, board and governance advisory and offering management consulting services. PFA membership is a great fit for the services we provide to our clients."

One of the highlights of the PFA calendar is the annual conference which will be held at the Hyatt Regency Sanctuary Cove on the Gold Coast from 29 April through to 1 May. Mr McNeil commented "Members of the Yarmouth team will be attending the conference again this year as we find there are great insights to be shared with some of the leading players in Australian real estate investment." Mr McNeil went on to say "By attending the annual conference and through our membership of PFA, Yarmouth is able to bring these leading insights to our clients."
